More on Privacy - Deathwing @ 5:42:07 EDT
 ChaoticLlama has sent word that Security News Portal has written up an article on Battle.net privacy issues that were spawned with the V1.06 Diablo II patch. While this news isn't the most fresh, I thought you might like to go have a read, considering it could be what influences the hackers to attack Blizzard a few days ago.

 This doesn't really bother me but I feel it could be a problem for blizzard if some employee abuses it. There needs to be a boundry on stuff like this. An example would be the Free Speech and Right of Privacy issue. The Constitution is too vague on what stuff news organizations can report on. So celebrities and other people's private lives are breached so it can improve ratings. There needs to be a clear cut line on what things are good and what are bad.

 Being abused again and again
 Have you ever heard of doing this earlier. I hope this is good because i dont like the god hackers on open b.net in D2

 I agree...and if you didnt do anything wrong then you neednt worry!!

 All I can say is that this is very dumb. And it's your own fault... if people didn't hack the game Blizzard wouldn't have to deal with it.
